I owed him - Snape's Soliloquy
>
A.N. Another monologue about James and Lily's deaths. God I'm getting repetitive. Advanced warning, I won't post the weekend of July
8th, I'll be reading HP4. Please review. Thanks to Merlyn for letting me use her Snape's family killed by Voldemort storyline.

>
Disclaimer: I don't own these characters, they belong to J.K. Rowling OBE, Bloomsbury, Scholastic et al. Please don't sue. As I have already mentioned, Snape's wife and son and their demise belong to Merlyn.
>

family, no one to mourn for me.
>
Lily, beautiful, kind and intelligent. She did nothing to me yet I hated her with all my soul. Now she will smile no more.
>
The Potters had it all: love, beauty, friends and a child. I have none of this and I am left to live out my miserable life tormenting students and myself. I once had a family but Voldemort took them from me. I owe the Potters double, James saved me and his son avenged my wife and baby son.

>
>
I am grateful to young Harry Potter yet I hate him. He is the son of my second worst enemy, he now has all the hatred I bore for his father and extra for himself. My only son died at Voldemort's hand, yet perfect Potter's son Survived; another way in which James Potter has bested me.
>
>
How did Potter's son survive? Why didn't mine? Why could Lily and James die together yet I had to be seperated from my wife as she died?
>
She died because I wouldn't join Voldemort; if I had the same offer now, would I do something different?
>
I HATE THE POTTERS; I am almost screaming hysterically out loud.

>
I hate them yet admire them, I envy them with all my heart yet I hate them with all my soul.
>
Curse the Potters, curse Voldemort, curse Black, Lupin, Pwttigrew and all the rest. I hate them all but mostly I hate myself. It's my fault my wife died. It's my fault Potter died while I owed him, now I will have to carry that debt all my life. Now I have to control my emotions, this
